TO HEAR THEIR FATE TO-DAY

TRIAL OF THE FIVE POLICE SERGEANTS.

THE COMMISSIONERS RESERVE THEIR DECISION -DEVERY AND CROSS WILL BE PUT ON

THE RACK THIS MORNING. Police Sergeants Hugh Clark, James W. Jordan Parkerson were tried by the Commissioners at the from Mrs. Augusta Thurow and permitting rested at her di orderly house in Second-ave. sergeants, and at the end the four Commissioners reserved their decision. Assistant Disorney Wellman, who acted as the prose F. J. Swift, who acted as counse the defence acted throughout the trials as if they convinced that the Commissioners had fully determined in advance to dismiss the sergeants rently for the purpose of having them on record when they might begin a contest in the courts for e reinstatement of the sergeants. It was 1:30 p. m. when the Commissioners took their seats in the trial room, and the five sergeants walked up to the railing and answered to their Commissioner Martin presided at the with Commissioner Murray on his right and Commissioners Kerwin and Sheehan on side Mr. Wellman. The sergeants were in plain grace of their position, and believed that their case the Commissioners was hopeless, Mr. House, ants tried jointly. He declared that every possible effort would be made to prevent or delay the trials, and the Commissioners and Mr. Wellman might as well understand that at the start.

Wellman then sprung the announcement sergeants would be tried separately, in so far that the testimony in each case would be to stand by itself, but that each witness for the ecution would be kept on the stand until the estimony regarding each of the sergeants had been Thus, after being sworn and examined in he case of one sergeant, the witness would be gain sworn and examined in the case of the next sergeant, and so on to the end of that witness's estimony, and the separate trials of the sergeants

MR. WELLMAN'S PLAN ADOPTED.

The Commissioners agreed to Mr. Wellman's an and overruled the objections of Mr. House, who contended that it was only another way of trying the sergeants jointly. Mr. House made a ong argument against the legality of the trials, ecause the sergeants had been ordered at short notice to appear yesterday, after having been informed that they were to be tried to-day. When objections had been overruled he moved to have the charges dismissed on the ground that the Commissioners did not have the jurisdiction to try men for bribery. If the sergeants were to be tried on the ground that they had been bribed to accept Mrs. Thurow as bondswoman for her girls, he said, then the Commissioners were assumright to try the men on a criminal charge, but if it was admitted that the sergeants were bribed there was no cause for complaint, as Department and by the law to accept bail.

Wellman simply retorted that the sergeants being tried for conduct unbecoming officers, denied.

Mr. Swift then took up the fight for delay, and objected to the trial of Sergeant McKenna. He said that after receiving notice to appear for trial to-day McKenna had retained Samuel J. Adams as his counsel, Mr. Adams had gone away somewhere to prepare for the defence, and could not be found when the Sergeant got the notice to appear yesterday. Mr. Swift also cited the case of Captain Siebert, who was once tried and dismissed from the force for alleged perjury, and was reinstated by the courts on the ground that the Commissioners did not have jurisdiction to try him for an alleged criminal offence. When Mr. Swift's objections had been overruled the hands of the clock in the trial room showed that nearly an hour had been consumed in argument by the lawyers. The case of Sergeant Clark was then called.

CLARK THE FIRST WITNESS.

CLARK THE FIRST WITNESS. Clark to be the first witness against him-which he had made when he accepted Mrs. Thurow as bondswoman for her girls in the Fifth-8t. Dollee station. Mr. Friend declared that such a required was preposterous. Mr. House shouted that he would advise Clark not to testify, even if it was necessary to defy the Commissioners. Mr. Wellsman said the Commissioners were inquiring into the conduct of an officer in the department, and they could justly demand that he answer questions as to entries which he had made in the blotter. Commissioner Martin—Is there any other any other was necessary. Mrs. Augusta Thurow was then called to testify. Mrs. Augusta Thurow was then called to testify thouse at No. 23 Second-ave. for two years before she was accepted by Sergeant Clark as the bondswoman for two of her girls who were arrested on the evening of October 2, 1802 Mr. Wellman called he pitched to the stream of the pitched the station for that dio the two girls. Clark was on a continuous that the latest the had been also down the had been also been obliged to place E on the sorgeant's sign. She me the described how when had been also had been obliged to place E on the sorgeant's few sign. She me the described how he had been also had been as bondswoman, as the entries in the blotter were shown to her, and she said that on one such occasion her husband was in the station with her, and Clark asked him if he was jealous of her. When her husband said had not know what became of the money after she left it on the desk.

PUT $5 IN A BOOK.

When Mrs. Thurow was testifying against Sergeant Jordan she said that on one occasion she her and had her sign the bail bond. She then laid her and had her sign the the $5 in a book which he held in his hands. That incident, she said to Mr. House, she had not told morning. The lawyer vainly tried to wring from her a confession that somebody had suggested such a story to her.

As a witness against Sergeant Parkerson, Mrs. Thurow said that when the girls were released from the police station on her bond they immediately went back to the house in Second-ave. She concluded her testimony by telling how she had been accepted as bondswoman a number of times by Sergeant McKenna.

The next witness was Inspector Alexander S. Williams, who had just returned from a cruise. His face was well bronzed by exposure to the weather on the deck of his yacht Eleanor. He identified the handwriting of the sergeants in turn, as the entries in the bolter were shown to him.

Clerk Hayes, of the Essex Market Police Court, was called and questioned about the ball bonds which had been signed by Mrs. Thurow and had disappeared in the court after the girls for whom she had given buil had appeared in court. He explained that the bonds were of no value when the prisoners appeared in court and they were not preserved. Commissioner Murray appeared to be greatly surprised that such documents should be thrown into the waste basket, and Mr. Friend came to the rescue of the witness by explaining that such had long been the practice in the Police Court.

Policemen Cooney and McCarthy and Sergeant Hrown, of the Fifth-st. station, were called to testify that Captain Doherty, when in command of the precinct, had frequently given orders to the police there to try to suppress Mrs. Thurow's house, and that such orders must have been heard by the sergeants who allowed Mrs. Thurow's house, and that such orders must have been heard by the sergeants who allowed Mrs. Thurow to give ball for the girls, and then the prosecution was closed at 4.25 p. m.

The lawyers for the defence first fought for an adjournment and then argued motions to dismiss the charges on the ground that no case had been made against the sergeants. Mr. House took the ground that, as Mrs. Thurow had testified to having that, as Mrs. Thurow had testified to having bribed the sergeants, she was an accomplice, whose testimony needed corroboration, and there had been no testimony to support her story. The motions were denied, and then Chief Cierk Kipp was called to testify about a general order and a rule of the department which resulted the sergeants to accept ball in all cases of misdemeanor.

When Sergeant Clark was called to testify in his own defence he stated that he had been a policeman for thirty-four years, and had not been required to answer a charge for twenty-eight years. He denied that he had ever received any money from Mrs. Thurow, and he declared that he had accepted her bond because he thought the rules required such action. Mr. Wellman asked: "If you had tolten money from Mrs. Thurow would you admit it here?" Mr. Friend's vigorous objections to the question only served to raise a laugh when the sergeant declared that he would have told the truth under oath if he had been bribed.

When Sergeant Liebers had given similar testimony, he was asked by Mr. Wellman why he had not refused to take Mrs. Thurow's bond, knowing her to be the keeper of a disorderly house which the capitain wanted closed, and Liebers said he had not consulted the capitain. her to be a captain wanted closed, and Lieu-captain wanted closed, and Lieu-consulted the captain.

Mr. Wellman-Was it not because you received

Mr. Weilman-was it not because you the $5.2 Mr. House protested against the question in language which caused Commissioner Murray to inquire if the lawyer meant to accuse the Commissioners of "buldozing," and Mr. House retorted that the Commissioners might understand that he was going to protect his witness at all risk. He strode to the side of Sergeant Liebers and assumed an attitude of defiance which appeared to fill the Commissioners with admiration and awe. Then the objection was overruled, and everybody in the room laughed when the Sergeant answered "No" to the question.

JORDAN'S CONTRADICTIONS.

The other sergeants in turn denied having received had merely conformed to the rules by accepther as bondswoman. None of the girls for myshe had been allowed to give bail had failed ing her as bondswoman. None of the girls for whom she had been allowed to give bail had failed to appear in court, they said. Jordan made a mess of it by declaring that he would not have accepted Mrs. Thurow's bail if he had known that she kept a disorderly house, and then having to admit that the entries which he made in the blotter at the time showed that she kept the house where the girls had been arresed.

The defence was closed at 6:30 p. m., and the Commissioners consuited a few minutes while the sergeants waited expecting to hear the verdict of their dismissad from the force. Precident Martin at length announced that the Commissioners would reserve their decision in each case until to-day.

At 10:30 a. m. to-day the trials of Captains Devery and Cross and Polleemen Glennon. Burns and Smith, for alleged blackmailing operations in the Eleventh Precinct, are expected to begin. Devery was alleged to be still sick in his home in West Twenty-eighth-st., and a member of his family said he would not be able to appear for trial to-day. In view of his refusal to submit to an examination by Drs. Hamilton and Fischer, at the order of the Commissioners, however, it is expected that his trial will go on in his absence. Officials at the Central office said yesterday that Devery would have preferred to be dismissed from the force on the charge of insubordination, based on his refusal to submit to the examination, probably, but the Commissioners were not willing to permit him to escape trial on the bribery charges.

Captain Cross was at the Central Office yesterday when the trials of the five sergeants were in progress, and it was evident that he would not seek to delay his trial on the pretence of liness. He said he had not heard from Colonel George Rilss, who had expected to appear as his counsel, and he did not know who might defend him in the trial to-day, but he hoped to vindicate himself. Captain Cross was a lawyer before he was a polleeman. Mr. Wellman has said that the trials of Captains Devery and Cross and the

The accused officers were James W. Chappel and James Pendergast, of the West Thirty-seventh-st, station, and Elton E. Kent, of the West Thirtieth-

Ernest Williams lives at No. 453 Seventh-ave. He said he left his house about twenty minutes before 1 o'clock on the morning mentioned to get some bread. At Thirtieth-st. and Seventh-ave., he said, he saw a young fellow throw something at a Chinaman. Williams said he laughed and the Chinaman ran down Seventh-ave, until near Twenty-seventht, when, he said, Policeman Chappel shouted, calling him by a foul name, drew his revolver and tred at him, the builet hitting him in the right hip. He said he was removed to the New-York iospital, where he was confined six weeks and two lays. He let Pendergast and Kent out of the case by declaring positively to the Commissioner that happel was the man who shot him. Policeman Chappel, in his defence, denied that he did the shooting. He said he heard the cry of Stop, thief!" and several shots were fired, but the did not know who fired them.

After further testimony, some of which was given by Captain Price, the case was closed. Decision was reserved.

by Captain Price, the case was closed. Decision was reserved.

Policeman James Corbley, of the Thirty-first Frecinct, was arraigned for trial yesterday before Commissioner Sheehan upon grave charges. It is declared that on July 14, while intoxicated, he assaulted a citizen named George Van Wart, and that on the following day he drew a revolver upon the same man and threatened to kill him. He is further charged with having been under the influence of fluoro on July 36, 72, 28, 29 and 36; that on July 36 and August 1 ne feigned illness, and that on July 36 he was absent without leave. On account of the police sergeants' trials Corbley's case was postponed until next trial day.

Gillen's way to the police station he told the following story:

"My wife had been drinking for several days. She
her a flask of whiskey. She returned about 9 o'clock at night in the company of four or five women.
After the women left she went upstairs to bed,
I started to follow her. She said if I attempted to come into her room she would kill me. To avoid trouble I slept on two tables in the saloon. I didn't hear any noise during the night, and the first intimation I had of my wife's death was given me by my steplaughter, Stella, who found her mother's door securely shut when she tried to enter the room."

Mrs. Gillen was the organist of St. Raphae's Roman Catholic Church, near Calvary Cemetery. She was Gillen's second wife, and he was her second husband. The couple were married eleven months ago, but did not live happily. The woman's first husband was a clerk in a Brooklyn drygoods store.

The revolver with which the shooting was done belonged to Gillen. Two of the chambers were empty. Yesterday afternoon Coroner Strong, assisted by Doctors Barry and Hinkson, made a posisted by Doctors Barry and Hinkson, made a posision recommendation of the body of the woman. Stella Ronan, her child, told the Coroner that the woman acted strangely vesterday, and that she stole the revolver with which the shooting was done from the husband. "I heard my mamma tell Mr. Gillen last night that if he came up to her room she would kill him."

Gillan was released last night by the Coroner, who decided that there was not sufficient evidence of foul play to hold him on.

The society was organized in the year 1876. The leading chemists of this country have been 'nrolled in its membership.

The meeting of the Yonkers Common Council on Monday night was the longest on record. The seasion began shortly after 8 o'clock and lasted until after I o'clock Tuesday morning. One reason for this was that no meeting had been held in a month and a good deal of business had accumulated. The most important matter settled at the meeting was partments. This matter is generally settled at the apportionment: Department of Public Works, $55,000; Court, $2,500; Fire Department, $12,600; Health, $10,000; 245 69; total, $155,045 69. ### NEWARK.

A complaint charging murder was made by Captan Daly, of the Third Police Princinct, Newark, yesterday against Henry Kohi in having caused the death of Joseph Preinal on June 16. Kohl is now in jail on another charge of atrocious assault on young men. Kohl lived with his wife at No. 279 Sixteenth-ave. Preinal was a bachelor, and made his home with an aunt in Elighteenth-st. On the night of Friday, June Li, they left Kohl's house together, and on Saturday the body of Preinal was found in Shinder's Creek on the meadows within a few feet of the tracks of the Central Railroad. A strap was drawn around his neck, and attached to it were several heavy iron coupling-pins. A stone weighing seventy pounds rested on the middle of the back and held the body face downward in the shallow water. It was at first believed that Preinal had committed sulcide, but suspicions were aroused. It was learned by investigation that Preinal had 1149 and a silver watch on his person when he left the house on the night of his death. The money and watch were not on the body. Soon afterward Kohl was arrested for beating his wife and sent to jail. The woman then accused her husband of killing his cousin, saying he had confessed the murder to her. Detectives have been working on the case ever since then, and Captain Paly says he has a strong case against Kohl.

Our success in fitting stout men with clothing encouraged us to per severe until like results were obtained in shirts and underwear.

The meeting had been called especially to heat its sentiment of the union in regard to the locked out tailors of the thirteen Fifth-ave, firms. Some action in regard to Judge Dugro's injunction will be taken as soon as the result of the hearing to be held to-day is made known. It was the sentiment of the members that the locked out men be encouraged in their fight. It was also decided to apply for representation in the Central Labor Union. protection of this port against choiera two years ago, has been detailed as fleet surgeon of the North Atlantic Squadron. He was professor of hysiene at the Post-Graduate Medical School in this city for some time, and when the cruiser New-York was building was ordered to supervise the methods to insure sanitation and ventilation in her construction. Surgeon Neison H. Drake, who has been in charge of the Marine Rendezvous in this city, is detailed to the Franklin, and Surgeon Lucien G. Henenberger, who has been on special duty in this city, takes Surgeon Drake's place.

The big armored cruiser New-York is expected at the Navy Yard from Philadelphia to-day, and she will be put into the drydock to-morrow to have her bottom cleaned and painted. There will be some repairs made to the vessel while here, but it is said that they will be of a minor and a general character, and that she will not be here more than a couple of weeks.

The white-painted sides of the cruiser Cincinnati were covered with canvas yesterday morning, and then coal barges were moored alongside from which her bunkers were filled with coal. To-morrow she will go to Gardiner's Bay. Long Island Sound, where her crew are to have two weeks of drill and practice in gunnery, small boats and maneuvring of the vessel. She has all her battery on board, excepting one 5-inch and three 6-pounder rapid-firing guns, and these have been delayed because of the non-completion of the gunmounts.
